

Your new label printer can cope with everything.

Label printer

There are many brands and many types of label printers on the market. From the larger industrial models, to the simpler desktop versions Grafokett helps you find the right one.

The starting point is always your need. For example, the number of labels per print occasion, the size and the material of the label, and what will be printed on the label. We also consider the working environment, in which the printer is to be placed, as well as connectivity, whether it's USB, Ethernet, Bluetooth or Wi-Fi.

We offer direct thermal and thermal transfer printers from well-known brands, such as Zebra Technologies, TSC, Brady and Honeywell. Of course, our range is expanded when new players or products reach the market. Tell us your specific requirements and wishes, and we will make sure to offer the printer that suits your needs.

Choose quality label printers that you can trust

Regardless of size and functionality, all our products have one thing in common: They always hold the highest quality. We carefully select products to introduce into our range, never compromising on functionality or quality.

Often on the go? In that case we can recommend some of our excellent mobile printers instead, that are both durable and reliable.

Do you need to print in color, or just black and white? Will the labels be exposed to sunlight and heat? Should it be a label printer for waybills or for food stuff? The difference is easiest expressed in the printing principle - direct thermal or thermal transfer. In addition, there are dual mode printers, which can print both direct thermal and thermal transfer.

Want to make the decision easy? Contact one of our specialists and let us figure out which label printer works best for you.
